Special displays will be featured, including one arranged by a local treasure hunter; a collection of coin oddities and curiosities; a display of medals produced by the Lancaster Red Rose Coin Club; a display of antique fractional currency (from the days when banks issued paper money in denominations of less than $1.00); a date-type numbers game played by a local collector; a display of local bank notes; an original stock certificate of 1794 issued for construction of the nearby Lincoln Highway; and a typical coin collector's library.

and the restaurant normally is closed on Mondays, a light buffet will be offered at a modest cost.

Clyde D. Cooper, Jr., sponsor of the event, emphasized that the event will be informal and educational. "The hobby has meant a lot to us," he said. "Our enthusiasm is free for the asking."

National Coin Week is an annual event of the American Numismatic Association, a nonprofit, educational organization chartered by the Congress in 1912. Chairman of the event is Leslie A. Winners of Pineville, Ia. Honorary co-chairmen are Donna Pope, director of the U.S. Mint, and Congressman Frank Annunzio.

A number of local expert collectors will be on hand to discuss the hobby and help identify and evaluate any "mystery" coins which anyone might wish to bring. These participants also will buy, sell and swap material. Although the event is free

END of PRESS RELEASE -- INQUIRIES and COVERAGE ARE INVITED

Here's what we offered:

A. Six educational exhibits:

1. Paul Haleman, president of the Lancaster (Pa.) Red Rose Coin Club, with his exhibit, "Odd and Curious."
2. Ira Styer, member of the club, with his treasure-hunting exhibit.
3. John Eshbach, member of the club, with a modern currency identification display.
4. Chick Cooper (me), with a coin display, "By The Pair," and an example of a "numismatic library."
5. Clem R. Foulk, local independent collector, with a display of fractional currency.
6. The venerable Dr. Henry C. Stouffer Jr., copper expert, who usually has a fine display in his shirt pocket. (Doc is a member of the club, as well as of the EAC.)

B. Two dealers:

1. Mark Kaufman, member of the club and full-time dealer of Lancaster, Pa.
2. Jerry Kochel, member of the club, vest-pocket dealer and winner of many, many display awards.

This was all held on Monday night, April 18. It was strictly informal, noncommercial. Otherwise, the restaurant staff promoted NCW throughout the week by wearing the official button, using the placemat (which gets a lot of attention, by the way) and by promoting a coin auction which I held the following Monday night at the restaurant.

I think that about wraps up NCW 83. Let me know what you think, also what you think we should do next year. We won't be in San Diego, but we're sure looking forward to going back to Colorado Springs next February.

Oh yes: The certificates. I believe the Red Rose Coin Club is going to submit a list of many of the same members who participated in a hobby-show event of some sort. (I was not involved in this.) In order to avoid duplication, therefore, I would simply like to have certificates for: Clyde D. Cooper, Jr., Helen J. Cooper, Clem R. Foulk, Mark Kaufman and Betty Devlin.

Although I don't know how you normally handle these reports, my suggestion would be to simply stuff everything — including this letter — back into the envelope and ship it off to the ANA. Let Neil Harris figure out what it all means.

On a more personal note, now, I'm tickled to say that the coin auction on the 25th was my last one as an "apprentice auctioneer." I survived all the bureaucratic rigmarole and am now fully licensed to commit auction under my own name. Consequently, I rolled out my newest venture, Clyde D. Cooper, Inc., and have some very nice prospects lined up — like two more coin auctions in the next six weeks, for instance! Sad to say, great ambitions and a nifty letterhead do not a tycoon make, and I'm still commuting to the newspaper job in Wilmington, Del., while Helen struggles with the restaurant and the antiques.

Well, gees, that about does it. Let us hear from you — at least before February. We'll be in touch likewise, especially as I nurture some vague ideas about NCW 84. And, of course, do stop in if you happen to be in this here neighborhood.

Best personal regards,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "Clyde Cooper". The signature is written in dark ink and is underlined with a single horizontal stroke.
